

Solar Weather

On Earth, “weather” means things like rain, wind and changes in temperature. The Sun experiences a different kind of weather. Its powerful magnetic field lines become twisted. When hot plasma from the Sun is expelled in large eruptions, it can create features called prominences. This image taken by NASA’s Solar Dynamics Observatory reveals a loop prominence at about the ten o’clock position.

KEY

prominence

border of sun

twisted magnetic field lines

